"The bush is an edge. An untamed wilderness. At the edge of the bush is Eramboo, a little shed in and around which art is made. While Australian sounds assault the senses, artists emerge from a manufactured world. Only in this space can originality be rediscovered."

Susan Milne, Artistic Co-Director

Eramboo is an independent non-profit artist environment and education facility established by prominent public artists Susan Milne & Greg Stonehouse.

Eramboo is sustained by income generated through workshops, art sales, residencies, grants and donations. Volunteers are integral to the management, direction and daily operation of Eramboo. Donations to Eramboo are tax-deductible.

Eramboo is a non-profit artist space, with an exhibition and residency program, located on 3.5 acres of bushland adjacent to Ku-ring-gai Chase National Park at Terrey Hills.

Visit eramboo.com for more information.

Eramboo offers a nurturing creative environment with:

- affordable non-residential studios for rent
- a large exhibition space for openings, projects and installations
- teaching rooms to creative industry professionals
- regular Masterclass workshops on wide ranging topics
- two major exhibition projects per year

If you would like to participate please contact us via our website or the email below

Eramboo is a place where art practice in purpose built studios runs parallel with the creative process of art making for students of all levels.

Eramboo art environment is a non-profit organisation supported by the community and we greatly appreciate your tax deductible donations.

To support us please fill out this donation form and email or mail it to Eramboo today.

Your donations keep art flourishing in your neighbourhood.
